About the Conrad Dietrich Magirus Award

The Conrad Dietrich Magirus award was first announced in Germany in 2012 and has been organised at an international level since 2013. The competition is named for a pioneering firefighter, Conrad Dietrich Magirus, who remains a role model for those in the profession no matter where in the world they work. The Ulm-based fire fighter set his sights on making the job safer for himself and his peers. One of his many revolutionary inventions was the "Ulm turntable ladder", which attracted worldwide attention. He founded Magirus over 150 years ago. The company continues to place the work of firefighters in the foreground and give them the special recognition they deserve with the Conrad Dietrich Magirus Award.
